

Local students put on 'night at the musicals' in aid of Hospice

Local lad Jack Grennan, student at Crompton House School recently put on an evening of entertainment to raise money for the Hospice.

Jack and a group of friends put on 'night of the musicals'. He got together with other young musicians to pull the evening together with their choice of music and entertainment.

The young group of students invited family and friends to attend the evening with a small charge for the ticket and managed to raise an amazing £415.00 for Dr Kershaw's Hospice.

Thank you to everyone involved for putting on the evening of entertainment and to everyone who attended the spectacular show.

A massive well done to Jack and his friends for raising money for the Hospice, we really appreciate the support!
